Assignment 1: Reflective Journaling – A Best Practice Educative Methodology for Professional Development

Due Date: October 21, 2015 by 12:00 NOON

Instructions

Your personal experiences in self-discovery; in learning about communication; in practising effective communication with friends, family, and peers; and in integrating theory, skills, and techniques into your future nursing practice are to be recorded in your reflective journal. Specifically, your journaling is to include the following:

Express your thoughts, feelings, insights, and reactions to course readings or to discussions you have had in the classroom

8. Challenge previously held assumptions and attitudes about communication and relationships and explore new ways of thinking
9. Test course concepts by using them every day and practice communication techniques and strategies with friends, family, and others. Reflect upon these experiences.
10. Reflect on how you will integrate communication theory, strategies, and techniques into nursing practice in each of the following areas:
 - communicating effectively
 - using communication to develop and nurture the therapeutic and life-giving nurse-patient relationship
 - using communication to promote patient safety
 - using communication to manage conflict
11. Reflect upon your personal growth, understanding, and development of communicating more effectively

Journal writing is not formal, but a reflection of your personal thoughts. Always use the first person noun “I”. You must submit your journaling in typewritten (word processed) format.

Your instructor will advise you how frequently you are to submit your journal for feedback. He/she will comment on your journal and may provide a few suggestions for the next journal entry. Your instructor will also provide you with feedback if he/she feels you did not fully understand the course readings or concepts discussed in class. The journal will be returned to you by your instructor.

The Marking Guide for this Assignment provides the expectations of reflections for this course. Your final mark on this assignment occurs only on the last submission point near the end of the course. You will be marked on the depth to which you explore and express your thoughts, feelings, insights, and reactions to material covered in this course; on the depth by which you have integrated theories, strategies, and techniques into your personal life experiences in the present; and the depth by which you have explored incorporating your knowledge and understanding of course content into future nursing practice.

Submit the Marking Guide with your assignment. See Appendix B

Assignment 2: Reflective Practice – Communication in a Psychosocial Simulation Situation

Due Date: November 10, 2015 by 12:00 NOON

Instructions

Video Recording (to be completed after Topic 1.1)

Record a three-minute video of a communication interaction between you and another individual. Work with a fellow student, family member, or friend to complete this assignment.

Follow these guidelines:

- Your partner is to make up a fictitious psychosocial problem.
- Your role is to communicate with your partner as you normally do in this type of situation.
- Ask your partner to add to the scenario and to your learning experience in various ways such as being obviously upset but not always willing to share information; being very loud at times, making you feel nervous; having peculiar behaviours that are quite distracting; and interrupting you during your communications, etc.
- Above all, have fun in doing this video! It will make the second part of this assignment easier and more meaningful to you and equally enjoyable.

Outcome Goal

Your goal is to demonstrate how you currently communicate with someone who has a psychosocial problem.

Video Consent

Ensure that your partner reads and signs the “Consent to Participate in an Audio/Visual Recording” form before you begin any recording. You are also required to witness the signing of the consent form. Ensure that your name is entered onto this form.

Student Identification

Ensure that you identify yourself on the video clip by clearly stating your first and last name and date of recording before you begin the conversation with your partner.

Technical Directions

Many options are available for you to record the session. You may record the interaction using the video equipment in the Practical Nurse program. Other options include using your own digital camcorder or the video function on your cell phone or camera. If you are using these digital devices, download the video clip onto your computer and email the video file to your instructor, or you may record/burn the video onto a CD or DVD.

Test the recording environment and equipment first. Check for these factors:

- Ensure adequate light so that the instructor can see you and your partner.
- Ensure adequate sound so that the instructor can hear you and your partner.
- Position yourselves so that both you and your partner are visible on screen.
- Position yourselves so that your conversation is directed toward the camera.

Please note: It is your responsibility to ensure that your instructor can hear and see both you and your partner. Later in this assignment, it will be important for you to be able to see and hear as well. You are encouraged to talk to your instructor to resolve any recording issues and to ensure compatibility between your recording device and your instructor's viewing applications.

Recording Complete

Make sure you have a signed and witnessed Consent Form, have achieved all of the technical requirements, have identified yourself on the clip, and have recorded the three-minute interaction. Then email or hand in the clip, CD, or DVD to your instructor. Make and keep a personal duplicate copy of the video clip.

Hand in the signed and witnessed "Consent to Participate in an Audio/Visual Recording" form to your instructor.

Analysis (to be completed after Topic 2.4)

Watch your video several times and identify your therapeutic verbal and non-verbal communication behaviours. Begin analyzing the interaction using the Analysis of the Videotape Session Forms including the Analysis Legend. You are not expected to analyze every single statement you and your partner made. Instead, follow these instructions:

Videotape Analysis Guide Form – Effective Listening Responses and Non-Verbal Behaviour

- On this form, list and analyze all instances where you used an effective listening response.
- Quote your partner's statements and your effective listening response.
- Identify the category of your effective listening response.
- Identify the non-verbal behaviour that accompanied each effective listening response you are analyzing, indicating whether it was effective or ineffective.
- If you did not observe any effective listening responses in the videotape, please enter "Not Applicable" on the form.

Videotape Analysis Guide Form – Blocking Verbal Responses and Non-Verbal Behaviour

- On this form, list and analyze all instances where you used a blocking response.
- Quote your partner's statements and your blocking response statement.
- Identify the category of your blocking response.
- Provide an effective listening response that may have been more appropriate.
- Identify the category of the effective listening response.
- Identify the non-verbal behaviour that accompanied each blocking response you are analyzing, indicating whether it was effective or ineffective.

You are not required to provide an alternate behaviour for ineffective non-verbal responses.

The assignment is graded only on the analysis of your therapeutic and non-therapeutic responses:

- Accuracy in identifying effective listening responses and blocking responses
- Accuracy in identifying the type (category) of effective listening responses and blocking responses
- Accuracy in selecting an alternative effective listening response by category and by statement for each blocking response
- Accuracy in identifying non-verbal behaviours as effective or non-effective
- You must analyze a minimum of ten responses.

Reflective Practice

- Describe your overall impression of your verbal and non-verbal behaviour.
- Discuss your verbal and non-verbal communication strengths, and opportunities for improvement.

- Identify any verbal and non-verbal behaviours you observed during the videotape session that were not effective, and provide your interpretation of the behaviour.
For example: “I noticed I nodded my head throughout the whole videotape session. I was not at all aware I was doing this. As I watched the video, I saw that this was ineffective because it looked very distracting and would be distracting to a patient in a real nurse–patient situation.”
Or, “I noticed I started most of my statements with ‘Uhhmm.’ This was ineffective because it did not make me sound very confident and it would not make the patient feel confident in me.”
- Identify all instances where communication failures occurred caused by misinterpretations or gaps.
- Describe what you would do differently in a similar psychosocial situation.
- Discuss the advantages and any disadvantages of reflective practice in guiding your continued growth in developing skills in therapeutic communication. Provide at least two credible references from the literature to support your opinion of the advantages or disadvantages of reflective practice during this experience.

Submission

All of the following must be submitted to your instructor to ensure the assignment is complete:

12. Consent to Participate in an Audio/Visual Recording (included in Learner Guide). Ensure that this is signed by your partner and witnessed prior to commencing the videotape session. The signed form will be submitted to your instructor after Topic 1.1. Ensure that you have printed your name on the form.
13. The video of the psychosocial communication simulation. This is to be submitted after Topic 1.1. Ensure that you have a copy of the video and ensure you have identified yourself by first and last name at the beginning of the video clip.
14. Analysis of the videotape session. Analyze a minimum of ten responses. This analysis must be typed (word processed). Use the forms provided. (See examples included in the following pages.) Include the completed Analysis forms with your Reflective Practice summary (see number 4 below). This is to be submitted after Topic 2.4.
15. Reflective Practice. This summary is to be typed (word processed) and should not exceed three pages. This is your personal reflection. You may write in first person; however, cite at least two reputable websites or journal articles to support your opinion of the advantages or disadvantages of reflective practice during this experience. Follow APA format for your cover page, reflective practice summary, and references. This is to be submitted after Topic 2.4 along with the Analysis of the video session forms (refer to item #3).

After your instructor has marked this assignment, the CD or DVD will be returned to you, and your instructor will delete emailed versions.

Submit the Marking Guides with your assignment. See Appendix A
